

Dear Anna,

Most teams don't need more ideas. They need clarity. The real work is deciding what matters and having the courage to focus on it.

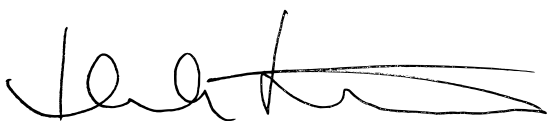

I've spent more than two decades working at the intersection of branding, digital products and creative leadership — helping agencies and global brands turn complex challenges into clear direction. That perspective allows me to connect disciplines that are often separated and create alignment around a shared vision.

I've known TestCo as a company that consistently puts craft and thinking first. What stands out is the ambition to build work that is both strategically grounded and creatively courageous. That is exactly the kind of challenge I've enjoyed throughout my career, and one where I believe I can contribute — not just by generating ideas, but by helping talented people align behind them and bring them to life.

I'm ready for my next challenge and always open to a conversation to see whether we're the right fit.

You can find selected work at willworkforkarma.com.

Best,

Henrik Lehtikangas

Creative Director